Brief CV: Giovanni Lodi qualified in Dentistry at the University of Milan in 1991. From 1991 to 1994 he attended the Oral Medicine Clinic of the S. Paolo Hospital in Milan. In 1992 he carried out his Civil Service working at the laboratory of Psychiatric Epidemiology of the Mario Negri Institute (Milan). In 1994, thanks to a bursary of the University of Milan, he started a post-graduate course at the Department of Oral Medicine of the Eastman Dental Institute (London University). His Doctor of Philosophy (PhD), was awarded in 1998, when he discussed a thesis on "Oral and dental aspects of hepatitis C virus infection". Since 1998 Giovanni Lodi works for the Oral Medicine Unit of the Department of Medicine, Surgery and Dentistry of the University of Milan and in 2001 he was appointed "ricercatore" (researcher) of the Faculty of Medicine and Dentistry of the same university. He is currently honorary lecturer of the Department of Oral Medicine of the Eastman Dental Institute (London University) and Secretary of the European Association of Oral Medicine. Giovanni Lodi has lectured in Italy and Europe mainly on oral medicine and evidence based dentistry and is author of numerous chapters, research papers, and reviews.
